How to change infrared thermometer from c to f model et002b

The non-contact digital infrared thermometer is ideal for use on people of all ages. This thermometer makes it safer to check the temperature of infants, children, adolescents, adults, and the elderly. The forehead thermometer is an easy and accurate way to monitor and measure body temperature and fevers. The simple design makes it easy to measure the temperature of yourself or another person without direct contact or risk of exposure. This portable fever analyzing device reduces the risk of cross-infection, making it easier and safer to record temperatures. Receive a quick and accurate reading as results will appear within one-second of the initial contact. Equipped with a sizable LCD display, understanding the results of a reading is simple. The high-resolution liquid display with a backlight makes it easier and gentler on the eyes. The high-temperature alarm removes any doubt of whether the patient has a fever or not. The display's backlight will turn red in the event of higher than normal temperature readings, the word "HI" is displayed on the screen, and an alarm will sound. The non-contact digital thermometer is used in a variety of applications, industries, and even has the ability to obtain the surface temperature of objects. You can use this device in hospitals, retail stores, homes, factories, and office environments. The thermometer will display both Fahrenheit and Celsius readings accordingly. LABORATORY TESTED © 1996-2020.Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates Infrared thermometers can be calibrated for accuracy just like other thermometers. In calibration labs (like the A2LA-Accredited ThermoWorks Calibration Laboratory in American Fork, Utah), technicians use industrial black bodies (like the IR-500 Portable IR Calibrator) to calibrate infrared thermometers. Black bodies approximate zero reflected ambient radiation and therefore the unimpeded emission of infrared energy for a given emissivity value (typically 0.95). Short of using a black body, the next best way to calibrate your infrared thermometer is to use a simple, inexpensive Infrared Comparator Cup. It is best to calibrate your infrared thermometer at more than one temperature (at 41°F [5°C] and 140°F [60°C] for example) and the Infrared Comparator Cup makes it easy. If neither an industrial black body or a comparator cup are available, however, you can do a quick calibration using a properly made ice bath.The usual challenges of using a boiling point for calibration (having to factor in air pressure and elevation) are further complicated with infrared thermometers because of the steam generated by boiling. Steam and the evaporative cooling and condensation that accompany it make it very difficult to get an accurate infrared measurement of a boiling liquid. But the surface of a properly made ice bath is reliably 32.0°F (0.0°C). If you live in the U.S., the thermometer you have received is pre-programmed to Fahrenheit units. To switch between Celsius and Fahrenheit, you can press and hold the power button when the thermometer is off, this will change units to Celsius instead of Fahrenheit (and back if needed). You can also read about this in the instructions for the thermometer you received in the package. If needed, you are also able to change the units of measurement for temperature by opening your app and going to Profile > Settings > Units. By making this switch, it will automatically convert all of your added temperatures to the desired temperature unit.
